OUR MISSION

We make products that are strong and practical. We can't be finding with being conventional phones that what if you drop them, instead we make innovative, tough phones that won't let you down in tough situations. Durability is at the heart of every Kodak product, whether it's made for an outdoor or a year of workbooks. Kodak phones are no exception.

Kodak has sharpened its focus to commercial markets as part of a new year repositioning. The company strengthened a complete end-to-end structure, made large cost reductions and exited non-core businesses - including the spin off of the Consumer Imaging and Document Imaging Businesses from new operators at Kodak. These aren't your new operators.

Today, Kodak is here, essentially stronger...

Since 2012 Bullitt Mobile Ltd has held the global license for phones and accessories for Cambridge, UK. Unlike our phones are sold over 50 countries, the aim? To make products that not only work, use the very latest tech and - above all - never ever let you down. What you'll find on this site is a range of rugged phones that make life on whatever device... We've come a long way to the max. Use them and about them - they can take a lot of abuse.

Kodak is coming out with an Android smartphone at CES

After Kodak nearly went bankrupt in 2012, the company went looking for ways to stay afloat. Today, the brand announced it is partnering with the Bullitt Group to unveil a new range of mobile devices, including smartphones and tablets, at a CES event in January.

According to the announcement, the phones are designed for "consumers who want a high-end experience but aren't always as comfortable using increasingly complicated mobile devices." The devices will be with image capture, management and sharing features.

Interestingly, the devices will feature some of remote management software to allow friends and family to somehow interact with your phone. The phones will have "easy access to printing and sharing services," so its clear Kodak wants to recapture the feel of holding a physical copy in your hand.
